DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to communications: Amendment and RCE filed 03/15/2006.
2. Claims 1-10 are pending in the case. Claims 1, 5, and 8 are independent claims.

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

3. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 3/15/2006 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

4. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

5. Claims 5-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential structural cooperative relationships of elements, such omission amounting to a gap between the necessary structural connections. See MPEP § 2172.01. The omitted structural cooperative relationships are: The script causing the processor to operate, as well as any interconnection between the . See the section on Allowable Subject Matter for how to correct this defect.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

6. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Art Unit: 2178

7. Claims 5-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

The claims are drawn to functional descriptive material NOT claimed as residing on a computer readable medium. MPEP 2106.IV.B.1(a) (Functional Descriptive Material) states:

“Data structures not claimed as embodied in a computer-readable medium are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer.”

“Such claimed data structures do not define any structural or functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention which permit the data structure’s functionality to be realized.”

The claims, while defining a “computer program product”, do not define a “computer-readable medium” and is thus non-statutory for that reasons. A computer program product can range from paper on which the program is written, to a program simply contemplated and memorized by a person. See the section below entitled “Allowable Subject Matter” for the Office’s suggestion to over come this rejection.

“In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with the data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure’s functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.” - MPEP 2106.IV.B.1(a)

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

8. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

9. Claims 5-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being obvious over Bayeh.

Regarding claim(s) 5-10, due to the missing interconnection between the product, script and processor, as explained above and below, the processor is merely operable to do the tasks claimed, and therefore any processor is operable to accomplish them, such as the one taught by Bayeh (Fig. 1, 12). Bayeh teaches a script Bayeh teaches a script (servlet) for generating content to be included into a XML document (col. 10, ll. 46-58). As the script does not necessarily cause the processor to do anything, the contents of the script are merely non-functional descriptive data. This descriptive material will not distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art in terms of patentability, see In re Gulack, 703 F.2d 1381, 1835, 217 USPQ 401, 404 (Fed. Cir. 1983); In re Lowry, 32 F.3d 1579, 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d 1031, 1035 (Fed. Cir. 1994). Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to provide any script because such data does not functionally relate to the steps in the method claimed and because subjective interpretation of the data does not patentably distinguish the claimed invention.

Allowable Subject Matter

10. Claims 1-4 are allowed.

11. Claims 5-10 would be allowable over the §101 and §103 rejection if the following changes drafted by the examiner were made

Claim 5, line 1, replace "product" with "product including a computer readable medium having a script language stored therein"

Claim 5, line 2: Delete "using a script language."

Claim 5, line 6: Replace "script" with "script, the at least one script control statement causing the processor"

Art Unit: 2178

Claim 8, line 8, Replace "script" with "script, the at least one script control statement causing the processor"

12. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

The claims generally recite a version of a technology known as XML Server Pages. The earliest indication of this technology was the Mazzocchi reference, which has been over come by Applicant's Declaration under Rule 1.131. The current rejection has been over come by Applicant's amendment that the script generates both the first and second document. In the combination of Bayeh and Monday at best the first document would be generated by the second document, and therefore does not meet the limitations of the claim. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
